Dear Reader: There is no magic formula to getting rich. Success in investment vehicles with the best returns on our research teams' efforts can only occur when the numbers add up to large gains in your portfolio. From our work at the Yahoo! Finance Money magazine we've learned that money is the best thing in life, but you have to plan for it, save it and spend it wisely. And we've also found that the market is always changing; no one can predict what will happen to the value of stocks, bonds or real estate with any certainty. So keep working on building your wealth - Document your thoughts so you can look back and know you have enough money someday to help your children and grandchildren care for their families.

Crimean-Congo hemorrhagic fever virus (CCHFV) can cause severe disease in humans, causing an estimated 50,000 cases of human infection and more than 500 deaths worldwide. The new CCHFV strain, isolated from an animal in a remote area of Russia, was found to belong to the Ib phylogroup and the C-strain based on sequence analysis of the glycoprotein gene. The complete genomic sequence was determined and compared to those of selected CCHFV strains, including sequences reported previously in GenBank. The genome length was determined to be approximately 28 kb. The CCHFV strain from Russia had an organization similar to that of other CCHFV strains, and was closely related to the genome of the Ankara virus isolate. The sequence data could facilitate comparative studies of molecular epidemiology, pathogenicity, and potential
