Humanity has hit rock bottom and has nowhere to go but upward. It seems like a good plan, but things don't always go as planned. When a few inconvenient variables are thrown into the mix, it can all end rather quickly. Will you get there in one piece? Gameplay Monkey Split is an interesting idea, but it's execution could have been better. You play as a monkey who has randomly been reincarnated as a human. It sounds like a story that would make you happy at first, but as you progress the game quickly descends into a mish-mosh of poorly-designed mechanics that are all thrown into the mix with so little thinking to be done. You start the game in a beach of colorful tiles with a few choices: to keep running around or hiding. If you hide you can't move, but if you run you can only peek around the corners and if you want to avoid getting hit you have to do a few stupid things like stop and look to see if there's an enemy on the ground. Even if you find an enemy, he's so easy to hit and run that it's not really worth doing. In a quick nod to the timer mechanic from Pac-Man, you have a speedrun mode that lets you clear the game in as little as 25 seconds. If you play it for 30 minutes you'll probably have cleared it many times over if you're the kind of person that memorizes all the shortcuts and planning to avoid even going near the enemy when they're around. There are also many locations where I got stuck and I have to run out of room, the game never keeps track of which tiles are safe. If you make it to the top platform you'll encounter an annoying yet easy to reach enemy that forces you to get dangerously close to more enemies while avoiding him. If you get hit once, you have to start all over again. The more you attempt to make a more planned life the worse it gets. There are a few times I had to abort a move and if you made the wrong move you'll fall into the abyss below for a few seconds before automatically restarting. You can abort your plans by getting hit if it's something you have to avoid, but getting hit will most likely result in your death and re-spawning as a monkey somewhere else. If you choose to lie on the ground and use the phone to avoid the

You may be wondering how an augmented reality platform like Hololens, can help you understand the complex biology behind cancer. Developed by Microsoft, Hololens uses an eyewear-like holographic headset, which allows the user to experience the world through a new medium. Hololens also use a Windows operating system, and leverages the computing power and resources of the Microsoft cloud to make apps available to the user. Here's what you need to know about this technology before understanding how it applies to cancer and effective cancer treatment. The Inside Story of HoloLens and the Future of Virtual Reality The Hololens, developed at Microsoft Research, is a holographic device that utilizes holographic light. The virtual world appears as a real holographic world, in front of you and uses head tracking to position it where you look. The device is said to have a "smart display" and allows the user to interact with the display using their hands. The concept is a first of its kind, and is still in the research stages

Heliborne Gear - East Germany Camouflage Pack via Kraftees.com The Heliborne Dorf Pack was the standard first aid and emergency medical kit for your East German soldier. (Show image to enlarge.) The Heliborne Dorf Pack was issued to airborne infantry deployed on the East German border. The Heliborne was employed in all popular airborne scenarios including Arnhem, Wurzburg, Budapest, Kassel, and the parachute assault on Berlin. When first issued the Dorf Pack contained over 100 items, but items were progressively issued during battle, and destroyed on the orders of the soldier. The Dorf Pack consisted of a group of canisters tied together by a belt, a field kit case, and an experimental field aid kit. All canisters and packages were sealed. At the rear of the kit was a first aid kit in a leather pouch inside of a watertight stainless steel box. This container formed a common unit with the weapon safety/black box issue by the West German armed forces. The Dorf Pack was replaced in the late 1980s by the Warsaw Pact version: the Heliborne Kassel Pack. The standard equipment of the Heliborne Dorf Pack was as follows: Item Attached to Heliborne Heliborne D-Orange Heliborne D-Black Heliborne D-Grey Heliborne D-Jet Black Heliborne D-Green Heliborne D-Blue Heliborne Dark-Green Heliborne D-Red Heliborne D-Black Heliborne D-Jet Black Heliborne D-Green Heliborne D-Blue Heliborne Dark-Green Heliborne D-Red Heliborne D-Black Heliborne D-Blue Heliborne Dark-Green Heliborne D-Red Heliborne D-Jet Black Heliborne D-Green Heliborne D-Blue Heliborne Dark-Green Heliborne D-Red Heliborne D-Jet Black Heliborne D-Green Heliborne D-Blue Heliborne Dark-Green Heliborne D-Red Heliborne D-Jet Black
