Why? I have a macOS application that I've been developing for a long time. I am testing an application on an iPad, and the iPad is set to Not Responding to the system. I've tested it on my MacBook Pro, and it runs fine there. I also have an iPhone, and it runs fine there as well. This application is set to run in the background, and I have tested this on my iPhone. It runs fine there as well. It runs fine on both iPads, and iPhones. But on the MacBook Pro? I am not sure why this is, but my application is not running in the background. Why? A: If you did not check the checkbox to start the app automatically when the mac starts, you need to do that first by going to System Preferences Security and Privacy General Tab Automatically start: (Un-check and check the box) Then save the changes, log out then log back in. If you did check the box, make sure to press the red button at the bottom (Un-check and check the box) then save the changes, log out then log back in.
